RequirementsInterfaceSample Query

In an effort to improve developer experience we are introducing Graph API Explorer v2.0 (BETA). This new, full screen version allows you to:

- Resize the Node Field Viewer, Response, and Access Token panels
- Manage permissions and display the app making the request, the current permissions, and the access token type
- Use a JSON option for POST parameters with syntax highlighting and notifications for any syntax errors

The Graph API Explorer is a tool that allows you to construct and perform Graph API queries and see their responses, for any apps on which you have an admin, developer, or tester role.

The tool is extremely useful during app development because it inherits all of your app's settings, including approved login permissions, features, and settings for any products you may have added. This allows you to quickly and easily perform Graph API queries that respect your app's settings. You can also use the tool to quickly generate access tokens, build and test complex queries, export query code samples, save queries, and generate debug information to include in support requests.

A large, bold blue letter 'R' is centered within a thick, light grey oval. The 'R' is a sans-serif font, with a vertical stroke on the left and a curved, tapered shape on the right. The oval surrounds the letter, creating a layered effect.

Battle station is heavily shielded

- Fire power greater than $\frac{1}{2}$ Star Fleet.
- Defenses are designed around direct large-scale assault.
- Small one-man fighter should be able to penetrate the outer defense.
 - Empire doesn't want a small one-man fighter to be a threat or they'd have a tighter defense.
